

Traveling Exhibit - George Washington Carver, Voluntary Weather Observer $7,650

NOAA Librarian Doria Grimes worked with National Park Service (NPS) Acting Superintendent Tyrone Brandyberg to assemble the new exhibit George Washington Carver - Voluntary Meteorological Observer at the Carver Museum at Tuskegee University. This 10x10 foot exhibit featured daily weather observations conducted by Professor Carver for 32 years. In addition to space at the museum, the exhibit was part of a traveling one featuring Carver as an environmentalist. The National Park Service also received 1000 handouts featuring Carver's handwritten weather data, and the library's web site on Carver data on the verso. The grant also enabled the NPS to receive another 10x10 foot exhibit and case for forthcoming exhibits. Funding for the project was provided by the NOAA Preserve America Fund.

Librarian Doria Grimes transfers exhibit material to National Park Service Acting Superintendent Tyrone Brandyberg

Opening boxes and setting up.

Museum patron from Boulder, CO, reviews exhibit.